Long time ago in a small town, there were three mice living in a church. Their dream was to have enough food to eat. One day, a rice businessman came to the town and he stayed in the church. In the night, the three mice smelled the rice and said, "So much rice! We won't be hungry again." However, the rice was on the bottom of a big box, so they could not get it. Then, the three mice thought of an idea. Biting the former's tail, they could line up and hang down to get the rice. After the first mouse was full, he had to climb up to be the last. In this way, they all could eat the rice.

But when the first mouse ate the rice, he changed his mind. He wanted to eat all the rice. The second mouse wanted to be the first, so he opened his mouth. About the third mouse, he worried his friends would eat all the rice, so he opened his mouth, too. Just at the moment, all the three mice fell at the same time. Although the three mice had enough rice to eat, they could not get out of the box forever.

Allen was my brother. He was cute and smart, but he couldn't talk. That was because Allen had a problem with his ears, and this made him not be able to learn talking. So, Allen had to go to a special school to learn the sign language. Allen's teacher said to me, "You also have to learn the sign language. It is the only way to understand your brother." Because Allen and I went to different schools, I had to pick him up after school. Every time when Allen saw me, he ran to me and started to "talk" about everything. For Allen, it was a happy time, but for me, it was terrible. I felt very embarrassed to use the sign language in public places. "People will laugh at me," I thought. Then one day, I wanted to stop it. I ran away when Allen came to me. Allen was afraid and kept running after me. Then there came that big car. It hit Allen. I knew I did a wrong thing to Allen. I felt really sorry to him. After that, I was not embarrassed about using the sign language. With it, I could help my brother, and this let me feel great about myself.
